High School Seniors Visit Campus

Homecoming Calendar Set

Plans for the 1964 Homecoming, November 13-15, have been announced by Dr. Harold W. Reed, President of the College.

The calendar of events begins with the annual Homecoming chapel at 10:30, Friday, November 13. Marsh McGuire will deliver the Homecoming message. Also at this time, the dedication of the new carillon, a gift of the J. F. Leist's, will take place. The Homecoming Queen and her court will also be presented in the chapel. Dr. Reed will present the queen with the traditional white Bible. The queen will have already been announced at the "O" Club bonfire the previous night.

Activities will continue Friday with a faculty-alumni luncheon at 12:00 at the Redwood Inn. In the afternoon will be the last intra-mural football game of the season between the Freshman-Junior team and the Sophomore-Senior team. The game time will be 2:00.

At 4:00-4:30 there will be a carillon concert. Climaxing Friday's activities will be the annual Homecoming Concert in Chalfant Memorial Hall.

The schedule for Saturday, November 14, includes the annual Phi Delta Lambda Breakfast at 8:00 a.m., a softball game between the winning society and a team composed of faculty and alumni at 10:00, various class reunions at 12:00 and a luncheon for the presidents of local alumni organizations also at 12:00.

Saturday afternoon will be given to a campus wide open house from 1:00 to 3:00, a band concert from 1:30 to 2:15 and a coffee hour for faculty and alumni from 2:30 to 4:00.

At 5:30 the women's game between the alumni and the "O" club will be played at Kankakee High School gymnasium followed by the men's game.

Sunday's activities will be the special services at the various local churches and a Vesper Service given by the Gale O organ Guild Sunday afternoon.

This year's Homecoming Queen, already selected last Tuesday but not to be announced until November 12 comes from an original group of six seniors and four juniors chosen October 13 by a vote of the student body. From this group of ten, five were chosen to be in the court and to be candidates for queen. The five chosen were Diane Bertschinger, Carol Sloan, Donna Stirratt, Pam Cartwright and Judy Goodman. Included in the original group of ten from which these five were selected were Susan Jimenez, Bonnie Sloan, Carol Stout, Bonnie Jackson and Linda McKinney.

Mock Election To Be Held

A mock election to coincide with the national election is being sponsored by the student council, according to Bob Simmons, chairman for the event.

The election will sample the student and faculty opinion of the issues and candidates. To be on November 3, the election should prove interesting in that a differentiation will be made between faculty and student ballots. According to Simmons, most of the responsibility for the election is being assumed by the students in the course, Political Parties, taught by Dr. Willis E. Snowbarger.

In addition, Dr. Snowbarger will be the faculty sponsor for a television hook-up in Recital Hall in the Burke Administration Building Tuesday, November 3, from the time the election results start coming in from around the country until the election is determined. Refreshments will be provided.

The second High School Senior Day got under way at 8:30 this morning with registration and a tour of the campus.

High School seniors from all over the Central Educational Zone are expected to take advantage of this opportunity to get a first hand acquaintance with Olivet.

On schedule for the remainder of the day is a session to meet the administrators of the college at 10:00. At 11:30 one of the two groups into which the seniors have been divided will be given a chance to visit any of the classes in session. The second group will eat lunch at that time.

At 12:50 the first group will eat lunch and at 1:30 the second group will get its chance to visit a class.

At 2:30 the gymnasium will be open for swimming, ping pong and basketball. Tennis will also be available. At 3:45 a team of seniors will challenge the college all-stars in a softball game.

Following dinner at 4:55 will be a Prayer Band at 6:15 in Kelley Prayer Chapel. At 7:30 will be a short Fun Time sponsored by the Social Committee and at 8:00 will be a concert entitled "This is America" given by the Concert Band, and the Treble Clef, Orpheus and Viking Choirs.

Halloween Party Tomorrow

The annual all-school Halloween Party will again be sponsored by the Junior Class. "The Monster Mash," as it will be called, will take place tomorrow night at 9:00 in the Recital Hall, according to Paul Christmas, chairman of the party.

Audrey Hall, chairman of the entertainment committee, has planned a program in which both students and faculty will be participating. One of the highlights of the evening will be several faculty relays one of which will be bobbing for apples.

The party will be costume with a five dollar prize given to the person with the most original costume and to the person with the ugliest outfit (with a mask). Ten dollars will be given to the group of students who together have the most original costumes.

Sandra Maddox and Bernie Martin have planned an unusual way for the refreshments to be served. The only hint to the uniqueness of the refreshments is that they will be served in Florman Hall.

Freshman will carry on tradition by cleaning up after the party.

Editorial . . .

Welcome, high school seniors. The Glimmerglass extends its warmest greetings with the hope that your stay here will be both informative and enjoyable. The opportunity uniquely afforded you in the program for the day, we hope, will better enable you to make one of the most important decisions of your life.

For those of you who have not yet decided whether or not to attend college, we hope that today's activities will enable you to be more aware of what college is about so you will have a clearer set of criterion with which to make this all important decision.

For those of you considering coming to Olivet, we hope that today's activities will point out some of the advantages as well as disadvantages of our school. We like it, otherwise we wouldn't be here. This does not, however, mean that it will suit each individual need, and this is the important thing in selecting a college.

Of course, a single day's experience, limited and directed as it will be, could hardly acquaint one with every aspect of college life. I doubt, for instance, that any of you will observe a class taking a test or turning in a long term paper. These are some of the less glamorous aspects of college, necessary though they seem to be.

You won't see the library crowded to almost full capacity or students studying in their rooms. This is not to paint a dreary picture of college. Study after all is what we came to college for. The purpose of this editorial then, while it might knock the stardust out of some eyes, is to present the real purpose and advantage of a college education.

It is only at a college where learned men of great potential have gathered to impart to students some of their knowledge that one can get much of the detailed instruction necessary for success in almost any field.

It is only at college where money is spent for equipment and facilities which will never pay financially so that the unskilled may increase their opportunity.

It is only with a college education, seemingly, that opportunity in many fields is available.

It is only with a college education that many from lower class backgrounds can ever hope to rise above their environment.

It is only with a college education, or so it seems, that the attitude of concern for common welfare is promoted and transmitted to future generations.

It is only with a college education that we will be able to face a cruel world as worthy and successful examples of Christians. It is only with a college education with a Christian purpose that many of us will be able to find the strength to do so.

To the Reader

"A Grand Plan"

I am extremely disappointed with a particular attitude which is much too prevalent not only on this campus but also on campuses of small and large institutions of higher learning. The attitude that grades mean everything is leading a great number of college students from true thought to mere rote memorization. I know that I will come in conflict with a great number of college students and possibly some members of the faculty with my following statement, but I will, nevertheless, state my case and attempt to defend it within my subjective sphere of opinion.

An Eloquent Silence-Reiterated

Several weeks ago Diane Bertschinger, Associated Students secretary, wrote an article for this paper concerning our pre-service church conduct, especially on Sunday mornings. Since that time I've observed little, if any, change in our general conduct, and I'm beginning to wonder if anyone read Diane's article, or if we're just unaware that a problem of this nature exists.

It seems that this problem is not confined to just our church services though, for this attitude of disrespect is present in our chapel sermons as well as other programs. It is indeed a disgrace to watch our Dean of Students beg for the attention of the students so that the chapel program may proceed. When we come to chapel we should at least be ready to stop our conversations when the organ begins to play since this usually indicates that chapel services as well as other also a disgrace to watch students study during chapel even though the program might be a little boring, especially when we have guests on our platform.

Enough about chapel! Let's now consider our first Intramural Society night (Oct. 20). Most of this program was humorous and demanded laughs and applause. However, laughter throughout the program in its entirety was completely out of place and certainly hissing, booing, chair-slammings, etc. were definitely out of place even though a portion of the program was political. To say the least, I was quite disappointed in the conduct of Tuesday night's audience. Of course I realize that environment and home training, or rather the lack of home training, influence an individual's attitude greatly, but a college education, in my opinion, helps a person become well rounded in all areas, and this includes the area of respect. So let's act like college students! Be respectful at all times, and especially in church and chapel.

Subjective tests in a number of instances do not test knowledge and the ability to use knowledge; they merely ask the student to recall rote memorized lists or bits of information.

I favor an evaluation of a student's work through the student's ability to think, to assimilate facts from research, to set down knowledge in an orderly fashion on paper, and to present a student's knowledge of information obtained in a research paper. Naturally, this would mean a great deal of work for the instructor; students would grumble and groan that they haven't the time to fulfill the instructor's requirements.

A large number of students would say that they could not do research papers because they are not very proficient in grammar. If this is the case, all the more reason why a research paper would be of benefit to the student. It would appear that a student merely memorized rules of grammar for a chapter or a mid-semester test, and that the student has forgotten these rules of grammar by not applying them. Hence, an interaction of various courses would be developed in a research paper.

Other people would state that they are poor readers. The vast majority of the great thinkers of today and of the past read and are still reading all the material they can possibly read. This does not mean that they read everything that comes along; they do not read good books—life is too short for that—they only read the best.

Persons in college should develop their reading. I am lucky that I have always enjoyed reading, and as a result, reading comes easy for me. Nevertheless, any person with desire can become a good reader. The idea that the textbook used in one class is the only book to use in that class is erroneous. A good student will read different authors on the subject studied so that various opinions will come to light for examination.

Some courses require the rote memorization of facts such as French, German, Spanish, and certainly some English rules must be learned before a person can hope to become an efficient linguist or writer, and in some instances an objective test is the only way to measure what has been learned. But by far, I feel that colleges are becoming mills in which students strive only to get the top grade and that thinking is relegated to second place. This does not mean that I am not going to try to get an A, because if I didn't try for grades, I would be flunked and possibly thrown out on my ear. I do think that we have arrived at a point where the persons who are really going to get ahead are those who

Political Points

by Dennis Kent

The Presidential campaign has been both long and hard-fought. In less than one week the American electorate will make possibly its most monumental decision in history. The choice to be made on November 3, 1964, will affect every United States citizen, and in a larger and fuller sense all humanity—that of the present and of the future. Heavy is the burden of responsibility which lies on the American people, for the fate of a Christian religion and a Western culture is contingent on such pivotal choices as this. If the wrong choice is made, the world will suffer the effects of that mistake.

It is well that honesty in government has become a major issue. Today a dark cloud hangs over the White House: it is a cloud of dishonesty, scandal, and treachery. The names of Billie Sol Estes, Bobby Baker, Carole Tyler, and Walter Jenkins have come to be associated with people high in the present administration. Many citizens have come to be shocked, disturbed, and angered by the shameful disgrace which has been placed against the National good name. The question has become one of whether the Nation can long survive lack of principle as a matter of policy or not. Senator Goldwater has said, "Simple honesty is not too much to expect in the highest offices of government." By its actions the present administration seems to imply that morality and decency are too much for the citizens to ask of present-day government.

During his lifetime President Herbert Hoover was a model for honesty on government. He was a great national leader who in the words of Senator Goldwater, "never had the slightest hint of scandal around him in his entire life." How well does the present administration meet the standards set by this great American?

By the same token, this writer has never heard anyone seriously question the integrity of Barry Goldwater. This writer doubts quite strongly that there will ever be reason to question the fact that Barry Goldwater is a good, honest man who offers American responsible leadership under a sound conservative philosophy. The choice is one between principle and political expediency.

As the citizens become more aware of for what Goldwater stands, the man and his philosophy become more and more popular. The campaign has been an uphill battle, but at last Senator Goldwater has drawn almost even. The fundamental principles involved have shaken the political affiliations of many. This writer, for one, before it became evident that Senator Goldwater would receive the Republican nomination, had been firmly Independent; but now he is an active Republican and will remain one so long as his party remains the party of principles.

Much more important, Democrats in positions as high as Congress have risked their political futures in changing to the Republican Party (as did Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina) or endorsing Goldwater although remaining in the Democratic Party. The Hon. John Bell Williams, D-Mississippi, announced on October 20, that he

Inquiry

Unless I am badly mistaken in my view of Christian responsibility, I will venture the following assertion: no able-bodied, normal Christian individual of 21 years of age or more has any excuse for not voting in next Tuesday's elections.

While I might have extended my statement to include other Americans, I wish to primarily direct these remarks towards those who profess to be Christians.

As citizens of the United States of America we are blessed with many privileges, rights, and freedoms. Most dear of those freedoms to us who wish to live a God-centered existence is the freedom to worship. This is a privilege which we cherish very highly and we would be willing to sacrifice even our lives to insure this crucial freedom.

However, we also are human beings who need employment, recreation, housing, food, clothing, education, transportation, and a number of other earthly provisions. And because of the context of democracy and freedom in which we find ourselves, we should be thankful.

Also we should manifest gratitude to God for the system of law and order which permits us to be so free in our living. Which brings us to the subject of government.

In our representative democracy we are given, as citizens of our "nation under God", the right to choose those who will govern, legislate, and carry out the laws for us. This is a valuable right but it is also a very solemn duty. The conscience of every so-called Christian should be smitten if he fails to exercise this right and duty to vote.

He has a unique triple obligation: to God, to his nation, and to himself. He must cast his ballot intelligently and conscientiously in the light of this three-fold duty.

In approaching my own first opportunity to vote, I realize that I must make my choices as a committed Christian, as a loyal citizen of my country, and as a self-respecting human being. I cannot do less, and neither can you, my Christian friend.

From the Pastor . . .

by Forrest W. Nash

The soul winning life must first of all be an attractive life. The unsaved are convinced of the reality of the gospel by what they see in our daily living. Yes, by what they see when we are unconscious of the scrutiny and critical observation.

Therefore, four characteristics must become our Christian life: Certainty, joy, purpose, good conversation. These rare qualities mark the world's great missionary, Paul the Apostle. With certainty he said, "I know whom I have believed." In joy he wrote, "Rejoice always and again I say rejoice." He declared his purpose when he said, "I press toward the mark, toward the high calling in Christ Jesus." And of conversation Paul said, "Let your conversation become the gospel of Christ."

Hodge podge living produces hot air. Witnesses - "Be ye transformed" - Be a soul winner.

Religious Reflections

by Richard Ungerbeuhler

(Part 2 of a 3 part series)

There is a second reason why it may not be old-fashioned to keep God around and to give Him an even greater place in our lives. That second reason is PEOPLE—MORE PARTICULARLY, THE NEED FOR PEOPLE TO SHARE TOGETHER THE COMFORT OF PEACE, HARMONY, AND GOOD WILL.

There was a time at the turn of the century when men considered peace, harmony and good will inevitable for the whole world. This confidence was rooted in a slogan which read: "Human progress inevitably upwards." Both the confidence and the slogan were seemingly well taken. Men's machines were at work, eliminating what supposedly causes trouble, friction, and tension between people, that is, hunger, disease and ignorance. Thus men were confident that before long there would be a roast in every pot and a car in every garage. In the hearts of men everywhere there would flourish a spirit of brotherhood and friendship. Men were sure that it was only a matter of time before a 'golden age' would dawn upon this earth for all to enjoy.

What happened? Where is THE GOLDEN AGE? In the meantime we have fought two world wars. In the last war, one race of people was nearly made extinct when Hitler slaughtered some six million Jews. And what is even worse than those two world wars is the fact that, in spite of them, we are not nearer to peace. On the contrary, we're as far away from peace as the Kingston Trio suggested in one of their best-selling records.

"They're rioting in Africa
They're starving in Spain,
They're hurricanes in FLORIDA
And Texas needs rain.
The whole world is festering
With unhappy souls;
The French hate the Germans,
The Germans hate the Poles.
Italians hate the Yugoslavs,
South Africans hate the Dutch;
And I don't like anybody ver much.

But we can be tranquil and thankful and proud,
For man's been endowed with a mushroom-shaped cloud.

And we know for certain
That some lovely day
Someone will set the spark off (China)

And we'll all be blown away.
They're rioting in Africa, (Harlem)

There's strife in Iran;
What nature doesn't do to us
Will be done by our fellowman."

This poor job that men have done internationally we, as a people, have done nationally. In New York City you take your life into your own hands if you are to walk one of the city streets alone, so deep is the hatred and the resentment on the part of those suppressed racially and economically. Similar incidents have occurred at the home of our Nation's Capitol, Washington, D.C. On the west coast of our nation the homes of several clergymen were bombed because they dared participate in a brotherhood meeting. We are all familiar with the events which have occurred in Birmingham as well as Philadelphia, Mississippi. Even the "City of Brotherly Love" Philadelphia, Pa. has been disfigured with the ugliness of racial demonstrations. In Detroit we are told

Frank Observation

Frank Ockert

Frankly, I suppose it is because the Glimmerglass is now being published weekly that someone suggested I write for the school paper. The old law of supply and demand applies—the supply is low, very low; in fact they must have dug a hole in the bottom of the barrel. Undoubtedly assuming that "necessity is the mother of invention," it was felt that some dozing giant of ability or some smoldering spark of genius might be prodded into life. Nevertheless, we'll give it a whirl and see what happens.

It has long been a bothersome fact that people seem to talk one kind of religion but often live another kind. On the other hand, it is also a fact that most everything looks different from different directions. Perhaps the reason some of these people seem to be saying one thing and doing something else is because of the angle of approach; — the point of view; the way I happen to be looking at it.

One day while sharing my deep philosophical insights with some guests in our home I said, "the fellow I have the most trouble with is the one who wears my shoes." My youngest son, Ron, that we can expect even more violence due to the discrimination of jobs. In community after community there is such distrust among neighbors that J. Edgar Hoover, the head of the F.B.I., had to make a special appeal that we do something about containing the fear that the man across the street may be a Red or a near-Red.

And this tension among people — this misunderstanding, this hatred, this animosity — are to be found in many of our homes. In this nation of ours, one out of every three marriages ends in divorce. In my home town of FORT LAUDERDALE the record was one out of every two last year. (Yankees stay home.) What is even more tragic is the bitterness which precedes the divorce. Occasionally that bitterness is as deep as it was for Diana Barrymore which is exemplified in the book which she wrote just before committing suicide, "Too Much, Too Soon."

How much different the marriages are in which God is given a prominent part. The difference is spelled out for us by some sociologists who went into one of our American cities. There in that city they made a very careful study of the marriage courts. They discovered that the husband and wife who belong to the same church and who attend that church regularly have A SIX-HUNDRED PER CENT BETTER CHANCE OF KEEPING THEIR MARRIAGE OUT OF THE MARRIAGE COURTS! And what God can do for a home, He can do for a nation, and a world as well. Therefore, if for no other reason than this, I would say that in spite of all our wisdom and understanding, God has not as yet, and never shall, become expendable.

pipied up from the kitchen, "Dad, I haven't been wearing your shoes!!"

While giving further consideration to what profound words to put to print, I spilled a bottle of ink. Upon wiping it up I found this poem had flowed from the pen:

As I walked across the campus
Of dear old O.N.C.

And watched the students
hustle here and there,
A little thought kept plaguing and nagging at my mind
... "now all these students, they are headed—Where."

Oh, some will soon be teachers of subjects great and small
And some will preach the Gospel far and wide.

But the thing that really bothers me and wouldn't quiet down
Was "just what are the goals they have down deep inside?"

For it's not our daily action that determines what we are.
Quite as much as does the goal
we have in view.

So fix your eyes on Jesus
Oh student friend of mine
And let all else take
Second place for you.

The Latest Word

"To Boot or not to Boot, that is the question. Whether tis nobler in the snow to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous pneumonia; or to take Boots against a sea of frozen troubles and by opposing stay warm."

With apologies to William Shakespeare, I shall now begin. If you will recall, in my column of a few weeks ago, I mentioned the fact that several noted authorities in the fashion world have stated that the boots that were so "in" last year will be "out" this year. I presented the question to you and you responded thus:

Darlene Ryan - (Freshman) - "Finally the fashion world is coming out with something practical. If you want to be dressed in the latest fashion, make sure you have a pair of high boots."

Leanne Petersen - (Sophomore) - "Even though the boots seemed to be quite the thing last year and will probably be more popular this year - I wouldn't be caught dead in them."

Iris DeLacey - (Sophomore) - "The boots that were so very 'in' last year are do for a comeback. Will I wear them? Sure!"

Judy White - (Sophomore) - "The store windows are full of boots again this year and they seem to be quite 'the thing' to wear. I suppose they are practical for snowy weather but I never had the urge to buy them. Besides, I don't think guys like them very much."

Linda Hill - (Sophomore) - "Boots for dress are quite the thing this year. I plan to buy a pair for comfort as well as looks. I loved them last year when the weather called for them."

Diane Giroux - (Senior) - "If I could afford them, I would wear them - but at the right time and the right place."

Olivet has spoken!

The boots that were "in" last year were more on the Galoshes-type. This year they're slimmer and taller. Laced with leather, suede, elastic or zipped to the knee, they're practical, smart and definitely the thing to wear.

The fashion collections shown in New York last July featured the Boot Look. Perhaps the most exciting version of this look shown was the look of "Spats." In heights from ankle to above the knee, spats (strapped coverings put over the shoe to cover the top of the foot and leg) may start a new type of boot trend.

On the question of whether Boots are here to stay - Jean Noe, fashion writer for the Chicago American wrote, in her column of October 13:

"Are Boots here to stay? Very definitely, even the cynics said boots wouldn't be in this year. There are more styles, more boots for more occasions than ever before. Whether they're functional, footloose or simply femme fatale, there's a boot for this season to fit every occasion."

Need I say more?

Time For A Change

Gregory Cooper

(Ed. Note: This is the conclusion of an article whose first part appeared last week giving this writers opinion of various issues on the presidential campaign.)

III. The present Administration proposes and backs legislation which raises taxes, creates social injustice, and gives a false image of our tax cut.

1. Medicare (support of the King -Anderson Bill):

a. Support of this bill would (1) cost 1.7 billion to 4.0 billion the first year (2) provide the same benefits for the rich as well as the poor (3) allow some states to have too much Federal aid while other states have too little (4) leads to higher taxes through Social Security.

2. Civil Rights

a. U. S. District Judge George N. Beamer—a Democrat appointed by the late President Kennedy—ruled against Negroes in Gary, Ind., when they asked for the transfer of 6000 pupils to schools in other parts of the city when he said: "requiring certain students to leave their neighborhood and friends and be transferred to another school miles away, while other students, similarly situated, remained in the neighborhood school, simply for the purpose of balancing the races in the various schools, would in my opinion be indeed a violation of the equal-protection clause of the 14th Amendment." The U.S. Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, on October 31, 1963, upheld Judge Beamer's ruling, noting that the Constitution "does not require integration. It merely forbids discrimination."

b. Civil Rights allows (1) bureaucrats to warn us to obey the 'spirit' of laws or face penalties (2) a federal judge to sit as absolute overseer of local community affairs (3) citizens—cease to be free individuals and become merely 'ethnic groups' (4) the government can invade the hearts and minds of men to search out their motivations and innermost thoughts.

3. Fallacy behind the tax cut:
a. The federal government wants an 11 billion tax cut while it increases its spending by 5 billion a year.

b. Quote from the Wall Street Journal: "If the government reduces taxes while it has a 9 billion deficit (or more) those 9 billion must be taken out of the hide of the economy in some other fashion. In effect the government will simply print up 9 billion dollars. The resulting inflation will take back from the people the relief that the government professes to give by 'lower' tax rates."

c. The rising cost of living stimulated by the $4.6-billion deficit in fiscal 1962 and the $6.2-billion deficit in fiscal 1963 has nullified for most people any possible increase in purchasing power.

IV. The answers to 6 questions will show dishonesty, financial manipulation, and corruption in our Administration.

1. Why was the Bobby Baker Case hushed?

2. Why was the personal dealing of the resident with Billy Sol Estes never told?

3. Why was the Enrico Fermi Award given to J. R. Oppenheimer when:

a. he contributed money to the Communist Party

b. his wife and brother were Communists

c. he had at least one Communist mistress

d. and he employed a number of Communists at war time Los Alamos?

4. Why was the President's Medal of Freedom given to Edmund Wilson when:

a. has had 4 wives

b. been the author of an immoral book

c. voted for the Communist Party in 1932 and the Socialist Party when Norman Thomas ran

d. failed to file income tax and bragged about it in his book (not the one considered immoral) THE COLD WAR AND THE INCOME TAX:

5. Why has the Skybolt, RS-70, Pluto nuclear missile, and the Nike-Zeus programs been dropped and 45 missile bases in Turkey and Italy closed on what has been termed an economic drive and yet not one nickel has been cut out of foreign aid to the pro-Communist dictators such as Tito and Nkrumah?

6. Why has the manipulations of the Johnson family to gain a financial empire in Texas never been disclosed?

Political Points —

will back Goldwater, with these stirring words: "I can maintain silence no longer, for in this critical hour silence is acquiescence; nor can I follow the easy path of political cowardice. —Because my loyalty to the United States of America and my beloved Mississippi is stronger by far than my devotion to any political party name, I stand here tonight to advocate the election of Barry Goldwater as our next President, for in my heart I know he's right!" It is quite probable that Congressman Williams will be treated severely for his convictions. This is at it must be at times. This writer only asks that before going to the polls, everyone might search his heart to decide which candidate is right.

To the Reader —

can think and present good research papers. A number of A students are going to be disappointed in life when they find out that they aren't as smart as their grades indicate, and a number of D students are going to go far in the work in which they engage.

We should remember that "some people have extraordinary retentive memories and can do with a minimum of notes, but phenomenal exceptions do not count. For humorists who define memory as the faculty enabling us to forget only emphasize an unfortunate truth. Facts are only the material for thought. Our manuscripts (notes, diaries, papers) should mirror our reading, our meditations, our ideals, and our approach to it in our lives. Anybody who has early taken the habit to record himself in that way knows that the loss of his papers would also mean a loss to his thinking possibilities."

Condemnation or commendation on my grand plan are welcome. Address these to the editors, Box 125.

Our campus is beginning to shift into high gear for Homecoming. This year Homecoming looks to be bigger and better than ever. There is a triple treat in store for you sports enthusiasts. sports activities, the winning society of the softball league (it looks like it will be Zeta) will play a team made up of a combination of faculty and returning alumni. This game will be played around 10 o'clock Saturday morning. Let's make sure that our alumni are made to feel at home. Get out there and root!

Saturday afternoon at the Olivet Athletic field there will be the annual football game. This year the Bulldogs will be playing the Bobcats. Right now they are both carrying a tie and a win into this match. So may the best team win! The Bobcats are the Freshmen-Juniors and the Bulldogs are the Sophomore-Seniors.

The traditional Homecoming basketball game will be on Saturday at Kankakee High School gym. The gym seats close to 3,000 and has good facilities.

Before this basketball game—and one of the first events before the alumni officially arrive on campus—the "O" Club will be sponsoring the all-school bonfire. The bonfire ceremony has been scheduled for Thursday evening. Due to its new location behind Nesbitt, it is expected to be twice as successful as last year—and it was good! For the first time the Homecoming Queen will be announced at this bonfire. Some of the other outstanding highlights at this ceremony include the introduction of the 1964 "O" Club basketball team (the boys who are going to romp those old, tired alumni) and the Olivet tiger who will be prowling around in the crowd. Helping us all through the program with their enthusiasm will be the "O" Club cheerleaders. Climaxing the evening as the fire begins to die we will set the flames soaring with Joe Alumni. He will be tossed into the fire by the "O" Club team with the supporting cheers of the cheerleaders and the mascot.

It is sincerely hoped that all the students on the campus will enthusiastically support all the Homecoming activities. Let's try to make the alumni's stay on campus an enjoyable one—one that will renew their pride in their alma mater. This will be realized if you make them welcome and maintain a good spirit.

SPORTS SKETCH

Frank Wilson of Sigma society is one of "O" Club's allstar players doing battle against the alumni on Saturday, November 14, 1964.

Frank is a graduate of Bradley Bourbonnais High School, Bradley, Ill., where he lettered in basketball, football, and track.

Frank is a good all-round athlete. At O.N.C. he won the 1963-64 ping pong championship and trophy, lettered in basketball, took second in golf, and played softball.

When the alumni return to defend the victory they won last year, they will have their hands full holding down Frank Wilson.

This reporter covered a scrimmage game played against the freshmen, on Tuesday, October 20th. In that game Frank dumped in 17 pts., and took a big share of the rebounds.

I talked to Frank the day after that game, and asked him how he felt about the Homecoming game. He said, "The 'O' Club team really wants to win this year. We're a fast break team and we will go hard all the way."

Frank is one of the biggest men on the team, and will be hard to hold down. His quick hands and keen shooting ability make him a potential high scorer.

I know Frank and the rest of the "O" Club team will do O.N.C. proud come game time, Saturday, November 14.

Let's all be there the cheer them on to victory.
